

Windshield....where to buy and what are you paying

Posted by F1rocks - 26 May 2009 01:54

So yet another cracked windshield from a wonderful errant rock on the track...

Go to get a price....$380 installed (installation is $80 from a neighbor.) Apparently the 944 windshield is now so low volume it's a "rare and exotic..."

I paid less to put in a lexan windshield in my Turbo S...

What have you guys paid (early car) for a windshield? I'm tired of putting windshields into these things I'm on number 3 now. Have you ever given credence to opening up the rules to allow lexan? The weight savings is insignificant if you use the thicker lexan and I've never gotten a scratch in that one.

I'm all for saving $$'s but these @#$%ers are starting to cost more to stick with glass.

Anyone have a cheaper windshield supplier near the Twin Cities?

Re:Windshield....where to buy and what are you paying

Posted by LVkid76 - 29 May 2009 20:40

hmmm i just bought a new front window from a local car window shop in LV and was 180 installed at the house.

Bought a rear hatch off craigslist for 50 bucks bought a rear hatch from junkyard for 75.

pretty cheap just to by new. they told me if they ordered a new hatch would be 345.

all glass.

=====